PREFACE

Lists of the graduates of the College of Liberal Arts of Northwestern University have appeared from time to time in college publications: in the University catalogues for 1860-61, 1861-62, 1862-63, 1863-64, with no comment as to occupation or address; in the catalogues of 1876-77, 1877-78 and 1878-79, with the occupation and address of each graduate; in the Syllabus, a College annual published by students, for '87, '88, '89, '90, '91 and '92; and in the Arrow, published by non-fraternity students in 1891.

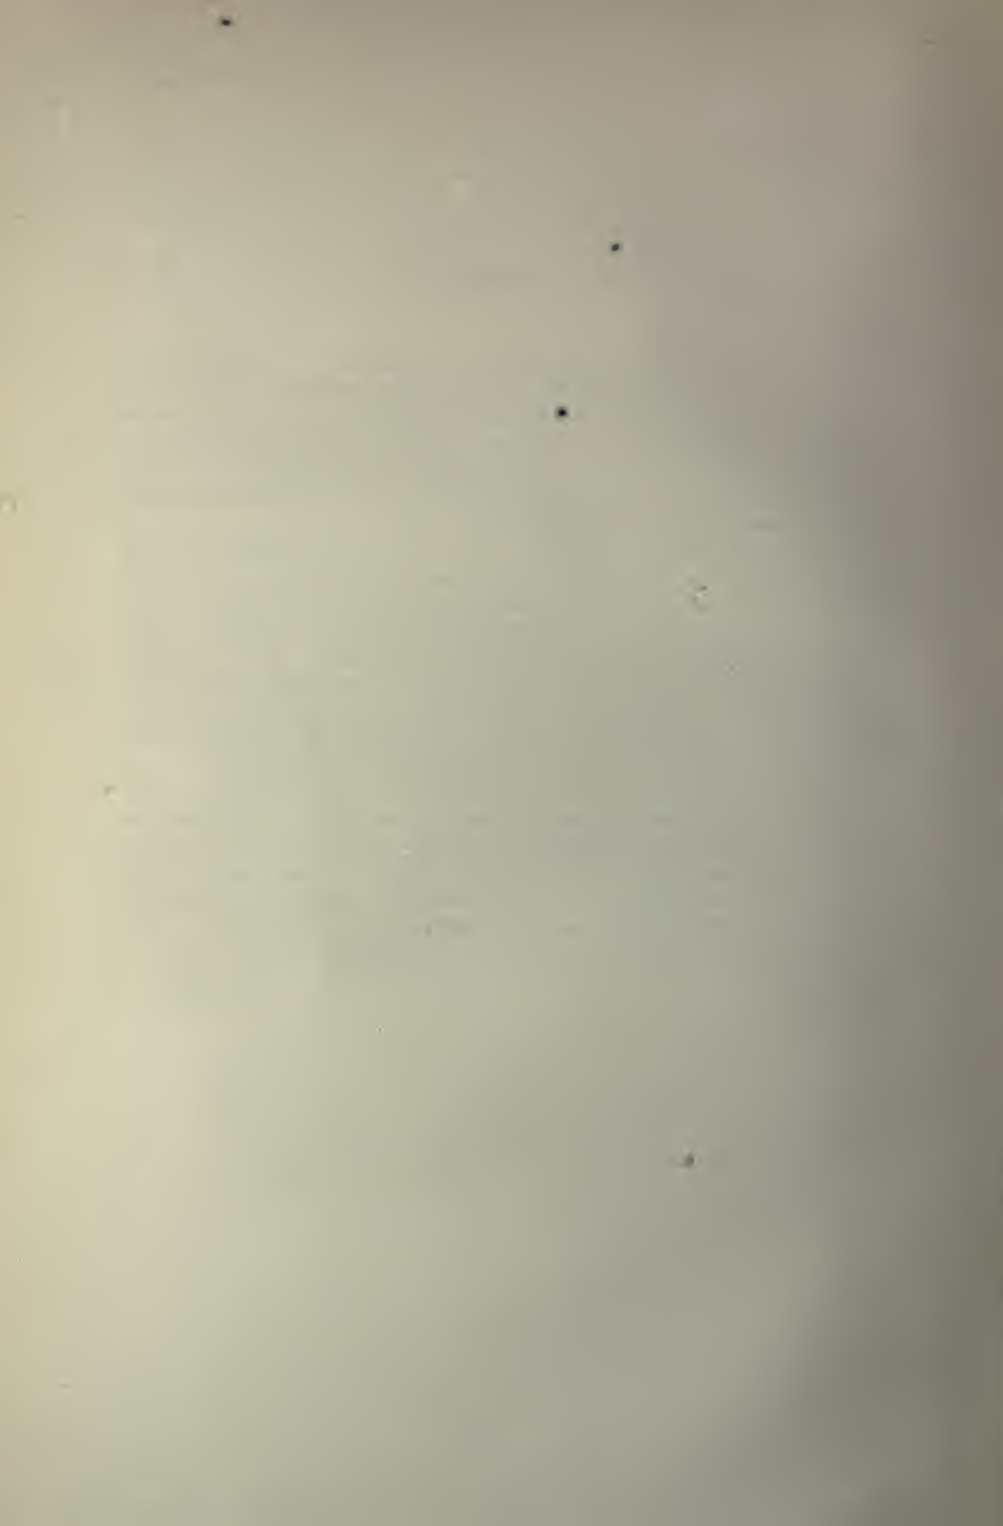

In 1894 a Biographical Catalogue of the Alumni of the College of Liberal Arts was compiled and published for the Alumni Association by Edwin L. Shuman, '87, Historian of the Association. Since 1894, through the intelligent and persistent efforts of Lodilla Ambrose, '87, Assistant Librarian, much valuable biographical material has been accumulated. The University authorities have provided for the preservation and systematic arrangement of this material, in ready-reference cases in Orrington Lunt Library. From this material, assisted by Grace E. Shuman, '02, Agnes Hayden, '01, and Elbertie Foudray, '03, the editor has compiled the following Record of Alumni.

Diligent effort has been made to obtain full information concerning every graduate, in many cases with gratifying success, but in some with no success whatever. While great care has been exercised to avoid mistakes, undoubtedly errors will be found. These errors as well as future changes in the residence and occupation of alumni should be reported promptly to RECORDER OF ALUMNI, Orrington Lunt Library, Evanston, Illinois.

An asterisk (*) is prefixed to the names of deceased graduates.

May, 1903.

GREETING TO THE ALUMNI

To the Graduates of the College of Liberal Arts of Northwestern University—Greeting.

For the first time in the history of the institution Northwestern University has prepared a fairly full official record of the life and work of the graduates of the College Department. We send it forth with the very best wishes for the future welfare and prosperity of our graduate body.

It is true of all great schools (and especially true of an institution like our own) that their permanent future depends upon the interest, activity, and loving care of their own graduates. The universities must depend upon their alumni for the financial support which is necessary to the widest usefulness. They must depend upon them for that moral support which sends back to their halls from generation to generation the descendants of those who formerly studied there and took away with them in their broader culture as well as in their diplomas the evidence of their sojourn. And they must depend upon the reputation and success of these very graduates for that growing consideration in the heart and mind of the public which will bring ever fresh streams of blood into the body academic.

An examination of this alumni record will reveal the interesting fact that even within the very short period of the life of this institution there is growing up a certain hereditary, a certain family tradition which determines where young men and women shall take their college course. Considering the brief time we have been at work, and the small number of graduates turned out in the early years of the institution, it is quite remarkable to find so many references to the effect that John Doe, graduated in the year 1901, is the son of number 200, the nephew of number 205, the cousin of number 607 and the brother of number 708. It reveals in a very striking way the permanent hold which Northwestern University in its College of Liberal Arts has taken upon one sturdy family after another.

Our records also show that the families of the alumni of Northwestern University at any rate are not dying out for lack of children and we may look forward with the confident hope that an increasing number of students will come as descendants of those who have already gone forth crowned with its honors.

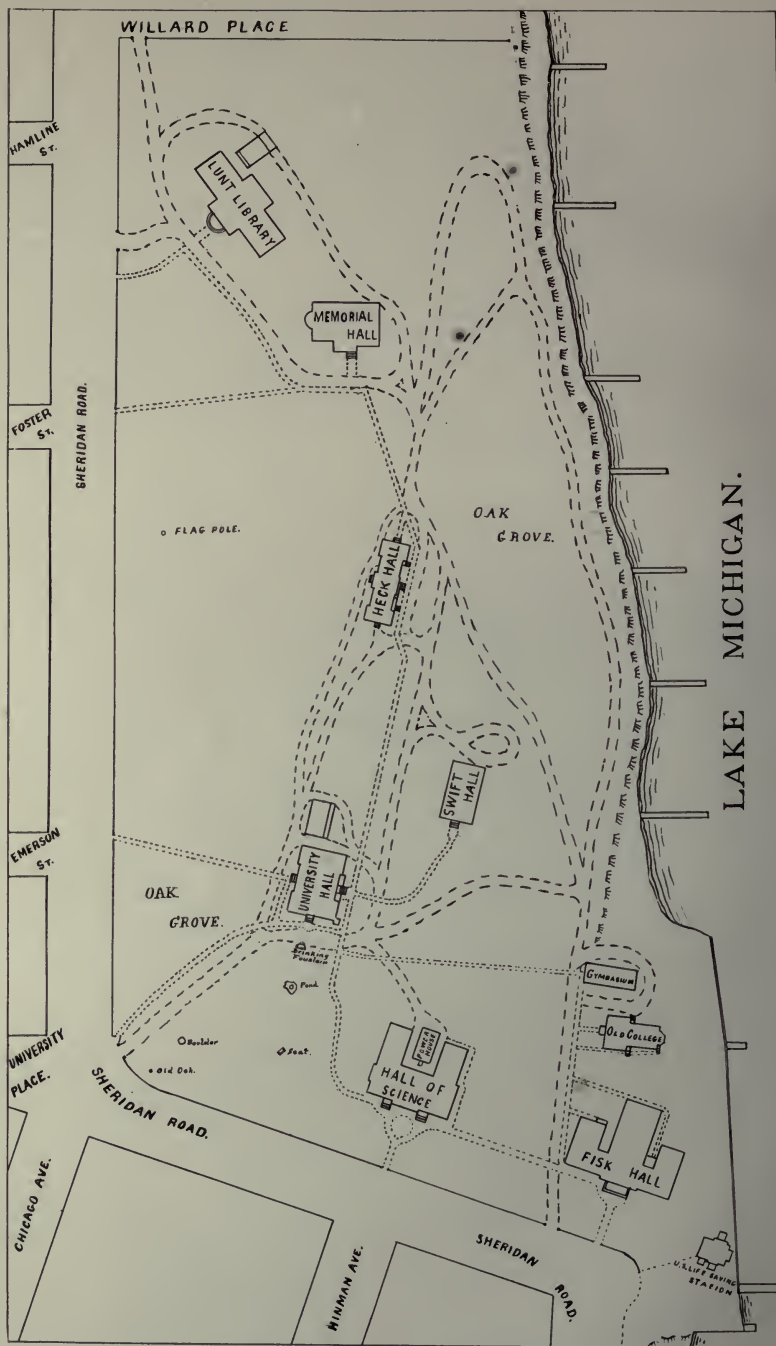

Those of us who studied for even a short time at Evanston went away with an impression which we shall never lose; went away with an interest which will never die. The association, however brief, with the earnest and vigorous men and women who make up the long line of former students; the stay, however brief, on this beautiful campus; the whispering of the wind in the great trees of the oak forest; the thundering of the waves on the lake shore; all combined to make an impression upon us which so far from growing weaker has become deeper and stronger with the passing years.

The cry of the gladiator in the old Roman amphitheater was "Morituri te salutamus"—"We who are about to die salute thee." Our cry is quite a different one. "We who are in the midst of the fight salute thee." And we call upon you to put on your armor and come up to Evanston, if not in body, at any rate in spirit, and help us—help us in all those ways in which tender and loving children should honor and protect their cherishing mother. We ask your presence at all our University gatherings. We ask your prayers for all our University undertakings. We ask your assistance morally and materially in all the future which is unrolling so rapidly before us and which is so full of potentiality and promise. Do your part to make this institution one of which we and our children after us may even be more proud and fond. Thus you will fulfill the injunction of the apostle and "magnify your calling."

Faternally,

EDMUND J. JAMES.

ANNALS
COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

1850.

March 31. Meeting held in law office of Grant Goodrich, south side of Lake St., midway between Clark and Dearborn Streets, Chicago, "for the purpose of establishing a University in Chicago, under patronage and government of the Methodist Episcopal Church." Present were: Rev. Richard Haney, Rev. R. H. Blanchard, Rev. Zadok Hall, Grant Goodrich, John Evans, Orrington Lunt, Andrew J. Brown, J. K. Botsford, and Henry W. Clark. [Of these nine men Andrew J. Brown survives.]

1851.

Jan. 28. Charter obtained from State legislature for University corporation, styled, "The Trustees of Northwestern University."

June 14. First meeting of University corporation. Plan adopted for development of a College of Liberal Arts, with a faculty to consist of a President who should also be Professor of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy, and three other professors. John Evans, M. D., chosen president of board of trustees.

1852.

Sept. 22. Committee of trustees appointed to recommend a site for the College.

1853.

June 23. Rev. Clarke Titus Hinman, D. D., unanimously chosen first President of the University. He develops a plan for sale of transferable and perpetual scholarships, to obtain funds to be used for the purpose of instruction and the purchase of a site for the University.

Aug. 11. Purchase of three hundred and eighty acres of land on the lake-shore, where the city of Evanston now stands.

1854.

Feb. 3. University site named "Evanston" in honor of the president of the University corporation, Dr. John Evans.

June 25. Abel Stevens, W. D. Godman and Henry S. Noyes elected professors in the College. Dr. Stevens does not accept. Assets of the University, $281,915.

Oct. 21. Death of President Hinman, at Troy, N. Y. He was thirty-five years of age. Graduated from Wesleyan University (Conn.) in the class of 1839.

1855.

June 15. Dr. J. V. Z. Blaney is elected Professor of Chemistry. During the year the main part of the frame building known later as Old College, was erected on Davis street at northwest corner of Hinman avenue as a temporary home for the University. It contained six class rooms, a chapel room, a small museum, and two halls for literary societies, besides two attic rooms for student lodgers.

Nov. 1. The new building is formally opened. 5—First registration of students. These were: Thomas E. Annis, from Laporte, Ind.; Winchester E. Clifford, Evanston; Samuel L. Eastman, Newbury, Vt.; J. ALUMNI IN THE CIVIL WAR

The attendance in the College during 1859-60 was thirty-six, and in the Preparatory School, which had just been organized, fifty. A large percentage of these students enlisted in the Civil War. Of the thirty-six men in the College, twenty-three, or sixty-four per cent., went into the war sooner or later. Some of these went home to enlist with old friends, but the majority enlisted in local Illinois regiments. Altogether we find a list of seventy-seven University men who went into the war—forty-two graduates and thirty-five non-graduates. It is interesting to note that two, one a graduate and one not, returned to their old homes and joined the ranks of the Confederacy.

That the material going from the University into the army was of the best sort, is to be surmised from the relatively large number of men who were promoted and who proved effective leaders. At the time of mustering out, three were Colonels or Lieutenant-Colonels, two Majors, three Adjutants, five Captains, eight Lieutenants, and four Chaplains. Seven died in the army, and six were discharged because of disability.
